Initial Meeting Notes
Director: Kevin K
Designer: Lucia T. Thomas

Topic: Shaanxi Cuisine (based off the Wikipedia page)

Three basic sections to consider for both mockups: About (general topic intro), History (different types and regions), and Dishes (3-5)

Mockup one: Dynamic, colorful, heavy on the images and color (more artistic)
-Format and text should be designed around the images and stylistic elements.

Ex:

Mockup two: More straightforward, informational design but still designed with care.
-images should be considered and placed around the text and format of the website

Ex:

Modern Chinese Cuisine Takes Shape
During the Song Dynasty (907–1127), Chinese agriculture and cuisine assumed its "definitive shape." Sorghum, mung beans, and new spices from India, Southeast Asia, and the Middle East were incorporated into the cuisine. Eating from communal dishes became the norm, further encouraging the use of chopsticks. The market for fine food and dining grew to meet the demands of a new social class of merchants, and, as a result, the modern restaurant was born. With the process of alcohol distillation now fully understood, undoubtedly, hangovers became more severe.

By the 14th century, chopsticks had become the primary eating utensil